

Roger Blobaum Student Travel Fund

Purpose: To support organic farming conference travel for College of Agricultural and Life Sciences (CALs) graduate students that are engaged in organic research in CALs. Funds should be used to cover expenses related to conferences such as travel, registration, meals and lodging. The conference must take place during the 2015 calendar year.

Eligibility:

- Student must be a full-time CALs Graduate Student conducting organic research (Undergraduate students may be considered for an award if they are planning to engage in organic research later in their academic career)
- The event that the student is attending must be identified as a conference on organic agriculture

The following application should be completed by February 1 and sent electronically to Kathryn Jones, kjones26@wisc.edu, 386 Moore Hall. A review committee composed of faculty from CALs departments will evaluate applications and make recommendations for awards. Decisions will be made by February 10, 2015.

Please include the following in your application

1. Name
2. CALs graduate program and year
3. Major professor
4. Brief description of graduate research project
5. Organic conference you wish to attend and a brief description on how attending it will support and/or enhance your research
6. Brief description of any involvement you have had in organic agriculture research, outreach, and education
7. Costs you are seeking to have covered by the Blobaum fund (Please submit a proposed budget on the attached expense report)
8. Alternate sources of funding for your travel, if any
