

BADGER TALKS

Badger Talks presents over 200 free talks around the state each year by over 300 faculty, staff and graduate researchers. Speakers volunteer their time, and define what types of audiences they want to reach and where, while Badger Talks staff covers the logistics of the event and travel expenses.

What are the benefits of joining Badger Talks?

- We will coordinate logistics of your talk events
- We cover your travel expenses (within University guidelines), including hotel, mileage and meals
- You do not have to accept every talk request and temporary leave/sabbatical is permissible
- You can let us know the type of groups you would like to engage with, as well as any limits in terms of geographic location
- While Badger Talks does not currently offer stipends to its speakers, you are welcome to accept stipends as arranged directly between you and the host group

Talk topics range from cutting edge discoveries to happiness in the workplace and everything in between. Badger Talks provides the perfect way to share the Wisconsin Idea!

“Badger Talks truly is the Wisconsin Idea in action. It’s great to have university-caliber programs able to travel to rural villages.” - Sarah K., Argyle Public Library
